CHRISTMAS DAY.

CHRISTMAS DAY.

If Christmas were struck out of buman life, the world, relatively and in a high moral sense, would be dead. Of all single conceptions that have entered into history, that of Christmas is unquestionably the greatest, in its relation to the earthly condition of mankind. That a birth in a manger at liethlehem should have produced such far-reaching consequences in and of itself is more over a powerful argument for the faith that half or more of the total population of the globe connects with the distinctive social and domestic features of the day.

Christmas is the concentration of peace and love, in sentiment, in definite that he concentration of peace and love, in sentiment, in definite of degree contribugias in New York by for Sydney and 40s to 41s 3d Mei-

Christmas is the concentration of peace and love, in sentiment, in definite acts of kindness, and in general conduct. The lowest conceivable depth of malignity and vileness is shown by the man who is impervious to its influence and especially by him who, to gratify his own selfishness and brutality, deliberately selects that season to reveal the possibilities of his lower nature. Such men are very rare, and stand before clean and genial human nature like the weiled prophet of Khorassan, when the mask was removed.

At Christmastide, in the home, in society, in the church, wherever civilization has probed and sweetened the heart of man, evil passions and tendencies, the baser instincts, surviving rancors, hardness, covetousness, meanness of every sort, are temporarily obliterated and permanently mitigated. The barriers of croed, party, caste, even nationality, are for the moment at least stricken down. The mere existence of a common sentiment in all races and countries, and under all diversities of condition, is one of the sublimities of life. The contrast between the distracted, tempestuous, degraded, tortured, hopeless masses, when Christ entered into humanity, and the intelligence, the education, the aspiration, the achievement, the funded results of struggle and endurance, in the twentieth century, demonstrates the expanding vitality of the deepest thought, the gentlest feeling, the simplest principle, that is gradually develcping peace, charity, righteousness among men.

Today the Prince of Peace is regnant in civilization, and moderates barbarism. The very distractions in Russia, produced by an expiring despotism, fed by ignorance and superstition, though partly regulated by intelligence, tend in the direction of the lasting peace that can only be secured through the same date last year. The United States is tranquil and harmonious and the year has been marked by imposing demonstrations in favor of moral progress and of religious unity.

There is nothing in Hawaii to disturb this great festival. Here, as ease where, the great American turkey will cease to strut, and due tribute will be where, the great American turkey will cease to strut, and determined to the healthy American stomach. ## THE CELEBRATION.

Today we shall rise and eat our fill, Today we shall jest and smile, For this is the day called Christmas Day, That comes in a year's long while; 'Tis a day when the world makes merry and never A heart that can help is sad-'Tis the day of days on our lives' highways, So we will eat and be glad.

Peasting, not fasting, shall be our rule, And garment of bright array, For we mark the feast as a holiday And not as a holy day; So raise the glass and a toast we'll pass And honors lustily sing, To a president or a potentate Or an old world throned king!

And yet, perchance, when the wit is in And the wine is out, we may Find thoughts back fleeing to Bethlehem, And the world's first Christmas Day-May see the Child in his manger bed With the Magi kneeling there-May mark the men of the ghostly flocks And the angel music hear.

Perchance to us homeward stealing, the truth May come to us there and then, That Mary's son brought peace to the earth And great good will to men, And we straightway may make firm resolve When next it is Christmas Day, To ponder less over life's good things

Let it not all be selfishness, Let it not all be greed, Lighten the load of a brother's life, Look to a comrade's need; Cherish the spirit, the Christmas spirit-Born when that bright star shone, Over the fields of Bethlehem,

Long centuries agone!

And more o'er the Master's way.
